GETTING STARTED

What is Think & Think Again?

Think & Think Again is a small, values-aligned community for people who enjoy thoughtful ideas, diverse perspectives, and deeper conversations. We curate content, host “In the Open” dialogues, and create simple practices that help us pause, reflect, and think again.

Who is it for?

Curious, open-minded people who value nuance, intellectual humility, and meaningful conversation. If you enjoy learning, exploring ideas, and stretching your thinking, you’ll feel at home here.

How does this all work?

You’ll receive curated content, monthly invitations to “In the Open” and opportunities to share your reflections or start conversations. There is no pressure, you participate in ways that feel natural and manageable for you.

What’s the password?

It’s included in your welcome email. If you lose it, just ask! The password simply keeps this site accessible to members only.

SHARING & CONVERSATIONS

How do I share content?

You can send articles, podcasts, videos, or your own reflections directly to Jeanne. Everything goes through a simple review before being added to the Library.

How do I know if the content is right?

A good rule of thumb: if it made you pause, think again, or see something from a new angle, it’s probably right. We’re not looking for perfection, just ideas that invite reflection. And if you’re unsure, send it anyway. I’ll make sure it aligns with our Editorial Philosophy.

What if the article I want to share is behind a paywall?

Two options here: either search for another piece by the same author, by looking up the topic on Google or in Apple Podcasts. Or start a conversation instead: simply share the reflection or idea it sparked for you.

How do I post a comment?

In the Library, open the article you want to comment on, add your name (your real name), and share your reflection. Try to write in a way that opens a conversation rather than closes it.

Can I start a standalone conversation?

Absolutely! Send through a question or reflection, and if it aligns, we'll shape it and publish it as its own post.

Can I start a conversation from content already in the Library?

Yes! Choose any piece that sparked something for you, write a short reflection, and we'll help shape it into a conversation starter.

Why are submissions reviewed?

Light curation protects the tone, purpose, and safety of the space. It ensures the Library remains thoughtful, balanced, and aligned with the community's values of curiosity, openness, and respectful conversation.

COMMUNITY & CONNECTION

How can I contribute?

You can contribute in many ways: sharing content, building on others' ideas, starting conversations, inviting thoughtful friends, or offering suggestions. Small contributions make a big difference.

How engaged do I need to be?

Life is busy. There's no pressure to participate constantly; just intentionally. Reading the newsletter, engaging occasionally, or joining an event when you can keeps the community alive.

How do I get in touch with another member?

Ask Jeanne and she can introduce you, with both people's permission. This protects everyone's privacy and comfort.

What if no one is in my city?

You can:
– join virtual sessions (coming soon)
– start your own small group when you're ready
The community is growing slowly and our hope is to have in-person events all around the world!

How often do you host events?

"In the Open" happens monthly, on the last Saturday of the month, in each active city. From time to time, we may also introduce workshops or shared dinners alongside the regular meet-ups.

What if I have suggestions or ideas?

Wonderful. Share them anytime. This community grows through the contributions and curiosity of its members.

How do I help support Think & Think Again?

Right now, simply being engaged is enough. As we grow, we may introduce optional contributions or community-funded support, but nothing will happen without member input.

PRACTICAL STUFF

How do I book a time to speak with Jeanne?

Use the link in your "Lovely to Connect" email or ask directly for the booking link. You can book a chat anytime for questions, ideas, or simply to connect.

How do I recommend this group to a friend?

Share the website or their details, and Jeanne will follow up personally to see if the group feels like a good fit.
